2.0 AN OVERVIEW TO THE PRINTING INDUSTRY IN TANZANIA.

2.1 Printing Sector in General:

Tanzania's sector is still in its infancy stage as most of the crucial printing works is done overseas, like South Africa, China, Mauritius, and Dubai. The sector needs to be developed as most of the machines available are of 1980's which can not meet the demand requirements of the fast-growing economy of new technology. Printing companies can not afford to have modern printing equipment mainly because of financial constraints.

Most of printing houses are using outdated technology machines.

As the country is trying to boost all sectors of economy such as education, tourism, communication, health, mining and many others, this gives printing industry a need to expand and use modern machines to meet the standards require in Tanzania market and East Africa at large.

Advertisements and information transfer through printed form have been increasing in Tanzania as the education sector which requires printed materials for daily uses. Companies are advertising through brochures and fliers in high volumes in Tanzania. The increasing number of schools shows bright future of printing business to cater for the demand of books and other materials

2.2 Commercial Printing

Following liberalization of Tanzania economy, Tanzania economy currently is dominated by private sector, there is a rapid and fundamental change in all sectors of economy, and the trend is projected to continue for many years to come.

These developments increase the opportunities for printing for commercial materials. In view of the above-mentioned developments, GOVINDA DIGITAL PRINT LIMITED is focusing on commercial printings as a strategic market segment.

The major customers range from firms to individuals, this is growing sector due to change in demand and customers needs.

Customers needs for quality products have been increasing; however existing technology in Tanzania is limited to cope with the demand due to out dated technology used by most of printing companies in Tanzania

2.3 Book Publishing

Government has liberalized the marketing and distribution of books and decentralized the procurement powers to the head teachers of primary schools instead of central and local government officials, the new system came into operation in July 2004 forcing all books publishers and books sellers to developing their respective distribution and marketing strategies and networks to reach the target markets.

Book publishing industry in Tanzania is still at infant stage with few established publishing house, there are only 8 good book publishers in Tanzania with number of titles approved by Educational Material Accreditation Committee (EMAC)

2.4 Newspaper Printing

There are almost 52 registered newspapers in Tanzania of which 46 are printed regularly on a weekly basis. The rest are printed on a monthly or quarterly basis.

Currently Tanzania has the largest number of newspaper publications in East Africa and there seems to be room for more publications to be introduced in the market. However the average circulation of serious Kiswahili newspapers is almost 35,000 copies and about 10,000 for English dailies. The average weekly is 60,000 copies. These circulation figures are a small of fraction of potential demand. The main reasons for this situation include the still nascent state of journalism in Tanzania, low reading culture among majority of Tanzanians, poor communication infrastructure in several rural areas and imbalances in the distribution of income, studies indicate that on average one newspaper is read by about 8 to 10 people, this imply that demand for newspaper in the country is well above 400,000 although the purchasing power is currently limited to a total about 230,000 copies.

It is good to note that the on-going social economic reforms provide innovative publishers with new opportunities to increase their circulation volumes or introduce new newspapers.

These opportunities will consequently lead to an increase in the printing business.

2.5 Trading conditions and license procedures for printing business.

The Government of Tanzania has simplified procedures for trading and printing to encourage printing sector.

Any trader basically is expected to have a business license obtained from municipal council, Tax Identification Number (TIN) from Tanzania Revenue Authority, Industrial License from BRELA, and evidence of working premises
